Neurofeedback Position Available for a Licensed Health Care Professional

At the Center for Attention Deficit and Learning Disorders, we treat Attention Deficit and Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity disorders in children and adults, using traditional and innovative methods - specializing in state-of-the-art and drug free treatment.

In order to keep up with client demands, we are looking for a licensed health care professional with experience in treating children and adults with ADHD and other related disorders. Neurofeedback plays a very important role in our treatment plans; however, we also rely on Brain mapping, traditional counseling, biofeedback and other therapy methods for many clients.

This could be a great opportunity for a clinician who wants to expand their horizons, learn about neurofeedback and related methods of training, and have the ability to add additional important skills to their toolbox. Current BCIA certification is preferred; however, we are willing to provide the mentoring component toward certification during the course of employment which should lead to certification within the first year at the center.

The right candidate will be a licensed health care professional with a master's and/or PhD and experience working with patients.

Reimbursement will be commensurate on experience and the value you bring to the practice.
